Guest Speakers:

Duncan Baldwin, Deputy Director of Policy: Standards

Duncan Baldwin is the Deputy Policy Director for ASCL. His areas of responsibility include curriculum and assessment, performance data, Ofsted and ICT.

Duncan qualified as a mathematics teacher and followed a career as a teacher and school leader, working various schools, where he has worked as a consultant for Capita, focusing on using data for school improvement.

He represents ASCL on a number of boards including Quality in Careers and is an expert member of various DfE panels.

Laura McInerney, Co-Founder Teacher Tapp

Laura McInerney is an education journalist, former secondary teacher, and co-founder of Teacher Tapp, the daily app uncovering the secret lives of teachers. She started her career in east London comprehensives and taught for six years before taken to court by Michael Gove for asking a difficult question about free schools. (She won, eventually).

Following this, Laura became a journalist, writing a monthly column in The Guardian and editing Schools Week, where her team won national awards for their hard-hitting scoops.

She is now the co-founder of Teacher Tapp, an app revealing previously unknown insights about teachers lives.

Vicky Merrick, MAT Data Development Lead for the Archway Learning Trust

Vicky is the MAT Data Development Lead at Archway Learning Trust, Nottingham. She leads on assessment, monitoring and data and has worked in education for 16 years. Vicky has developed and implemented Archway's bespoke secondary "Common Assessment Framework", enabling subject leads across the trust to collaborate and discuss how best to design "common" and "comparable" assessments built on effective curriculum design, tracking progress and targeting need for intervention, at classroom, department and school level.
